Home Again.

Dr. E. T. WASGATT,
(From the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery,) having had the rooms formerly occupied by him at 2 1-2 Kenduskeag Bridge;

But which was burned out in the recent fire, repaired, remodeled, and fitted up in the best manner, with all the modern instruments and appliances for the performance of all kinds of operations in Dentistry, begs leave to inform his old friends and patrons, and the public generally, that he is at home again in the same old spot, where he would be happy to see them and wait upon them with anything wanted in the Dentistry line.

He would call special attention to his new apparatus for generating Nitrous Oxide Gas, Sprague's Patent,—the only generator that makes a pure and tasteless gas, and the only one of the kind ever in this city.

He continues also his specialty of administering ether spray, which is fast taking the place of the old method of inhalation, being entirely safe to the most delicate persons.

Please give him a call at his new rooms.

Chalybeate Spring Water!
BOTTLED FROM THE SPRING, AT KATAHDIN IRON WORKS, ME.

This water holds in solution a large proportion of Iron, with SULPHUR and a trace of ARSENIC, and, from its combination, is one of the best means of restoring an impoverished blood to a healthy state. It is peculiarly adapted to relieve debilitated conditions of the urinary organs, and in many cases has completely cured persons who have tried many other medicines without any relief.

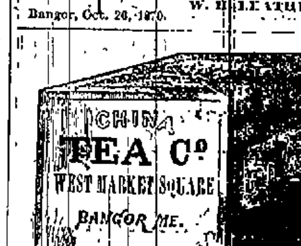

It can be taken at any hour of the day—but after meals is preferable—in quantities from one half pint to two pints per day. It blackens the stools and produces other changes that occur in taking iron in any form.

PURE TEAS.
Just Received
FROM JAPAN AND CHINA,
—BY THE—
Mutual Store Company,
No. 22 & 24 Central Street.

Large invoice of fresh and very elegant flavored New Teas, imported by the most direct route, and selected by an American agent of the highest integrity and undoubted skill, sent out to China expressly to guard against, and thoroughly protect the American consumers of this delicious beverage from the persistent and consummate frauds practised by the Chinaman, in curing and packing Teas for the American Market. And most wonderfully has it succeeded in preventing and exposing John Chinaman's rascality, as one trial of our Teas will well attest, prices lower than can be found elsewhere in New England.

ALSO,
PURE COFFEES,
of the choicest grade, imported expressly for the "Mutual Store Co." from "Mocha," "Java," "Ceylon," "Rio," and "Porto Cabello," and can be sold for one profit only, which is less than any other Store in the Country.

Our Roasted Coffee is all prepared by an American House of long standing, and whose reputation for honesty and determination is beyond suspicion, and are not allowed to pass through the hands of the Chinamen, where we would be sure to receive the villainous adulteration. Sure to suit. Try them. Our are already well known in the community, and are well appreciated. N. C.

We have also very large and carefully selected Stock of all kinds of goods entering into the stock of first class Grocery Store, and at sale at our store can be noted, Tea, Coffee, Spice, Saleratus, and a few such articles; but also, Molasses of all grades, Syrups, Pork and Lard, Kerosene Oil, Flour, Meal, Butter, Eggs, and all kinds of country produce, everything in the Wooden Ware line, from a Salt Box to a Clothes-horse, also, English Pickles, English Mustards, English Sauce for your fresh meat, Sardines, Lobsters and Oysters in cans. Tomatoes in cans and very cheap, all kinds of canned fruit; Jellies in Tumblers, a large stock of Bluebury Stand just the thing now wanted to make up Wingate's Barnett, Knight's, Lewis, and other flavoring extracts, Preston's Cocoa, and in fact everything pertaining to a real and sold at prices that defy competition.
First Class Grocery Store,
Our clerks are all real Yankees, and will be found at all times ready and willing to attend politely to all who may favor us with a call, and speaking of that, the proprietor himself is not slow.

Money Cannot Buy It
For Sight is Priceless!

THE DIAMOND GLASSES,

Manufactured by J. E. SPENCER & CO., New York which are now offered to the public, are pronounced by all the celebrated Opticians of the World to be the MOST PERFECT, Natural, Artificial help to the human eye ever known.

They are ground under their own supervision, from minute Crystal Pebbles, melted together, and derive their name, "Diamond" on account of their hardness and brilliancy.

The Scientific Principle on which they are constructed brings the core or centre of the lens directly in front of the eye, producing a clear and distinct vision, as in the natural healthy sight, and preventing all unpleasant sensations, such as glimmering and wavering of sight, dizziness, &c., peculiar to all others in use.

They are mounted in the finest manner, in frames of the best quality of all materials used for that purpose. Their finish and durability cannot be surpassed.

CAUTION.—None genuine unless bearing their trade mark stamped on every frame.

LOWELL & SPENCER,
Jewelers and Opticians, are Sole Agents for Bangor Maine, from whom they can only be obtained. These Goods are not supplied to Peddlers, at any price.

90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST IN CURRENCY.
Interest Payable May and November.
J. EDGAR THOMSON, CHARLES L. FROST, Trustees.

The Bonds are issued at $20,000 per mile against the portion only of the line fully completed and equipped.

The greater part of the road is already in operation, and the present earnings are largely in excess of the operating expenses and interest on the Bonds. The balance of the work necessary to establish through connections, thereby shortening the distance between St. Paul and Chicago 45 miles, and 90 miles to St. Louis, is rapidly progressing, in time for the movement of the coming grain crops, which, it is estimated, will double the present income of the road.

The established character of this road, running as it does through the heart of the most thickly settled and richest portion of the great State of Iowa, together with its present advanced condition and large earnings, warrant us in unhesitatingly recommending these Bonds to investors as, in every respect, an undoubted security. A small quantity of the issue only remains unsold, and when the enterprise is completed, which will be this Fall, an immediate advance over subscription price may be looked for.

The Bonds have 50 years to run, are convertible at the option of the holder into the stock of the Company at par, and the payment of the principal is provided for by a sinking fund. The convertibility privilege attached to these Bonds cannot fail to cause them at an early day to command a market price considerably above par. U. S. Five-twenties, at present prices, return only 4½ per cent. currency interest, while these Bonds pay 8¼ per cent., and we regard them to be as safe and fully equal as a security to any Railroad Bond issued; and until they are placed upon the New York Stock Exchange, the rules of which require the road to be completed, we obligate ourselves to re-buy at any time any of these Bonds sold by us after this date at the same price as realized by us on their sale.

All marketable Securities taken in payment free of Commission and Express charges.

JOHN H. LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

THURSDAY, NOV. 24, 1870.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

In accordance with the custom introduced by the Pilgrim Fathers, to-day has been designated to be observed by the people of the United States, as a day of Thanksgiving and Praise. The annual observance of such a day, it is well known, originated with the early settlers of Massachusetts, who after suffering untold hardships during their first season on the Northern coast, were favored with a bountiful harvest which exceeded their highest expectations, and they set apart a day of "rejoicing and thanks to the Great Giver of all good" as a suitable recognition of the blessings of the year." The custom became a permanent institution, was taken up in turn by every New England State, and for some years past has been observed throughout the nation by the official recommendation of the Chief Magistrate.

The connection between the religious origin of the festival and its joyous social character is as legitimate as it is obvious. Before the first Thanksgiving, the Governor of the colony sent out a "fowling expedition," that for the festivities of the week they might have "more dainty and abundant materials than ordinary." Here, then, arose the custom of a "Thanksgiving dinner," of which the members of the household were called home to partake, thus making the day the occasion of the most pleasing of family reunions. For this the choicest viands and the fairest robes are prepared. In it three or four generations mingle in the same family circle, children, grand children, and great-grand-children being the crown of the felicity of parents and grand-parents, and the delight of uncles, aunts and cousins of different degrees.

And who can find it in his heart to object to such a method of observing the day?—What is it that, whether expressed or implied, furnishes the deepest and surest foundation for social joy, and happy family reunions? Is it not an assurance of Divine love and favor? Is it not a consciousness that civil and religious liberty, health, prosperity and peace come from God? Can any possible discrepancy be heard between the angels song of peace and good-will and social rejoicing? If the sublime or lovely objects of the natural world set forth the Creator's praise, if the oceans and rivers and mountains are resonant with Divine praises, if the sweet incense of flowers is worship, is not the very existence of joyous, loving, united Christian families, and the feeling which they manifest, a continual Thanksgiving?

We believe in the social observance of the day and that such occasions, known only in favored Christian lands, and unknown to the vast domains of heathenism in which the rights of the various members of the family, and especially of the weaker members, are not regarded or the purity of the family known or maintained, are pleasing to the common Father of man.

We expect, then, to-day that our churches will be filled with sincere worshippers, and that many a family re-union will take place, as a fitting accompaniment of the public thanksgiving. The occasion suggests and pleads the wants of those who are in distress, of those who want food or fuel, or clothing, or health, and those sufferings may be mitigated with sympathy or seasonable relief.—Let the responses to such pleadings take a practical form, and diffuse gladness in suffering and sorrowing homes—this is one of the most appropriate exercises of a Thanksgiving day. We trust such deeds of charity will form a part of our social Thanksgiving and rejoicing. Their reflex influence, to say no more, must always be very great.

THE BELFAST AND MOOSEHEAD LAKE RAILROAD. The Associated Press Agent at Belfast sends the following dispatch:—

BELFAST, Me., Nov. 23.

The Railroad Commissioners as referees between the Maine Central and Belfast & Moosehead Lake Railroads in the matter of the lease of the latter, rendered a decision in favor of the Belfast road, awarding that the road was ready on the first of November according to the requirements of the contract, that it is a first-class road such as the contract calls for, and in a fit condition to be opened during the winter and spring. They also decide that the corporation have until July next in which to complete minor details by the terms of the contract. The Commissioners also regulate the running of trains if questions arise in consequence of a further refusal on the part of the Maine Central Road.

We have not seen the full text of the decision, but from information, derived from an undoubtedly authentic source we are obliged to question the accuracy of the above statements. We do not understand that the Commissioners decided that "it is a first class road such as the contract calls for," but that they distinctly recognize that the specifications have not been complied with. They hold that the road was ready for the rolling stock on the 1st of November, although in complete running order, and their construction of the contract admits of a doubt whether the complete finishing of the road at that date is specifically required, hence, giving the road the benefit of the doubt, they decide that a reasonable time may be allowed for completing it, which will afford an opportunity to do the work necessary to bring it up to the specifications. If our information is correct, and we have every reason to so regard it, the Belfast agent of the Associated Press has made a most unauthorized use of his position in sending out a statement calculated to produce altogether erroneous impressions in advance of the publication of the proceedings. The time allowed by the Commissioners is granted, as we regard it, for the express purpose of enabling its builders to do what is yet required to make it a "first-class road, such as the contract calls for."

THE GERMAN BUND. The treaty with the South German States, Baden and Hesse, for the establishment of a German bund, was signed on the 15th. It adopts the North German Constitution, and the protocol makes the following stipulations: The Constitution to go into effect January 1st, 1871, with the introduction of a common military budget, the transfer of the postal and telegraphic service in Baden to the Bund is postponed to January 1st, 1872; Baden and Hesse to be in no way responsible for the recent loan of the existing Bund; the laws concerning the press and public meetings to be placed within the jurisdiction of the Bund; Hesse to have no more votes in the Bund and Baden 3, making 18 in all; in questions affecting only particular States, their votes only are to be taken; a declaration of war can only be made with the assent of the council; Southern Hesse is to return six members and Baden fourteen to the German Diet for arbitrators; in the German Diet it will be necessary to have a majority of three-fourths, and not two-thirds as hitherto.

A GREAT WORK COMPLETED. The N. Y. Times has a telegram announcing the confluence of the waters of Lake Superior and Portage Lake, through the ship-canal across the promontory of Keweenaw; in other words that Keweenaw Point is an island and the ship-canal an accomplished fact. Some idea of the importance of this great work may be formed, when it is understood that the ship-canal is to receive the commerce of Lake Superior.

AN AGED WOMAN.

ORLAND, Nov. 21, 1870.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier.

There died in this town Nov. 14th, Mrs. Luella Gross, aged 107 years and some months. Her name on account of her extreme age, has appeared in your columns before. So seldom is it that human life is prolonged beyond a century, that when it is thus prolonged, its possessor becomes an object of wonder and curiosity. I often questioned her in regard to her age, and her answer was invariably "I have been borned a great many years."

Seldom is there occasion to chronicle the death of one so aged, and in thus doing and while other localities are from time to time publishing accounts of their aged dead, allow me, through your columns, to claim for Orland, Hancock County Maine, one of the oldest, if not the oldest person whose death has occurred in this country for many years.

The subject of this sketch was born in 1763. She distinctly remembered incidents of the Revolutionary War, many of which I have heard her relate, often speaking of the British who came up the river and drove away her father's cattle. Such incidents of her girlhood made a deep impression upon her mind, and in her last years she enjoyed rehearsing them.

Her parents, who were among the first settlers of Bucksport, then resided at North Bucksport. She was one of a large family, not particularly distinguished for hardihood or longevity. She married early in life, had a family of children, and lost her husband some 50 years ago by drowning, since which time she has lived a widow. She lost a son years ago, who died in old age, himself having passed the three score years and ten allotted to mankind.

Her physical organization was of the most perfect kind, to which her longevity was owing, and not to any particular habit of life, which as a whole was in grave contradiction to our concieved laws of health. She was born to a life of privation and toil, and in early girlhood, through life until death, she was immoderately addicted to the use of tobacco, especially in the form of snuff.—In this as in most cases of extreme longevity, we look in vain to see our cherished hygienic rules for the preservation of health, exemplified.

The organism of this old lady was a model, and from careful examination, she would in all probability have been selected as a person likely to survive to a good old age. In stature she was of medium height, five feet three inches, chest measure thirty-eight inches, inclined to corpulency, every part of her body well developed. Upon rigid examination, both before and after death, I could see nothing particularly remarkable in her organization, except the extreme size of her arteries and veins, or I might say her entire Vascular system.

She never had any severe sickness, and all of her bodily functions were well performed to the last. With the exception of being nearly blind and partially deaf, there was nothing about her to indicate her extreme age. Her appetite was always good, her sleep sound and healthy. In her mental powers she was in her dotage, memories of early childhood and childish thoughts being the solace of her last days.

A month ago she bid fair to live, but symptoms of "Senile gangrene" began to manifest itself in the right leg, caused by ossification of the femoral artery, gradually increasing until some few days before her death, when from a mis step she fractured her right hip, thus hastening the hour of her departure from this to a kinder world.

In making a post mortem examination, I found the bones chalky and crumbly from age, and the arteries of the leg ossified (turned to bone). Her vital organs were sound.

Her last days were made comfortable by the kind attention of Mr. and Mrs Harriman under whose care she has been for a few years past. She had become a town charge and as such, has been supported by Capt. Harriman, contractor for the poor, under whose care she has received only kindness and attention. T. H. CHASE, M. D.

LATEST NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Canal Commissioners have voted to close the canals in New York on December 8th.

On Tuesday the laborers at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, unearthed a parcel containing a large quantity of counterfeiters' implements and eleven plates. The parcel is supposed to have been buried by a party of Italian counterfeiters, several years ago.

John Butler, a boy ten years old, on trial for the murder of a comrade, was acquitted in the Hudson County (N. J.) Court on Tuesday, on the ground of irresponsibility.

The rain storm Tuesday night was unusually severe in New York city and Jersey City. A large brick building, corner of Second avenue and 18th street, N. York, was blown down. There was great difficulty experienced in navigating the ferries. The tide was the highest of any time for several years.

It is reported that the Central Pacific R. R. has purchased the Central Utah Road and intends immediately to push it through to connect with the Kansas Pacific road.

The census returns from two hundred counties throughout the Southern States and the District of Columbia give the colored population at 769,378, against 690,9[illegible] in 1860.

The formal acceptance of the Spanish Crown by the Duke of Aosta was received in Madrid on Sunday. The escort squadron leaves Carthagena for Genoa on Friday.

Burglars entered the residence of Speaker Blaine in Washington early Tuesday morning, but obtained nothing.

All the Baton Rouge rioters except six suspected of the murder of Harry Whitman, colored, have been admitted to bail.

The executive committee of the Red Stocking Base Ball Club of Cincinnati has issued circulars to the members announcing their determination not to employ a professional man for 1871.

Two Fenians named Walsh and Boucher were arrested on Tuesday at the Railway Station in Manchester, England. Three hundred cartridges and papers in cypher were found in their possession.

Only 180 out of 493 elections in Italy were final, and those undecided are to be repeated. The King has written a letter to General Prim congratulating him on his labors in the government Regency.

The suit of the Hope Mutual Life Insurance Company of Connecticut, to recover on a "guaranty note" given by Simon Baldwin, was decided on Tuesday in the Superior Court by a verdict of $807 for the Company.

E. D. Litchfield of London has sold the main and branch lines of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad, 800 miles in all, to the Northern Pacific R. R. Co. Litchfield is to complete the main line to Breckenridge, whence it will be extended to the great bend of the Missouri. The Pembina Branch on the British boundary line will be immediately commenced.

The unprofitable business of that melancholy institution, the Dead-Letter office, is becoming very large. During the month of October no less than 337,810 undelivered letters were sent there to be disposed of. Only 102,541 of them could be returned, owing to the prevalence of endearing signatures, such as "affectionate husband," "dutiful daughter," "loving friend," "your adoring Charles," "your faithful Laura," &c., which give no clue to the sender, and to the fact that many letters come undated and illegibly post-marked. All without addresses are opened, burned and the contents confiscated. In the letters returned, there were, beside checks and drafts for large sums, cash inclosures, amounting to $7,182,03, which the owners after much tribulation will receive. In the unreturnable letters, we may infer that there is an equal sum of money which the owners will never see again. The remedy for all this trouble, delay, and loss is simple. Let the sender write his address plainly on the outside of the letter, and the Post-Office will return it to him unopened, if it is not called for within 30 days.

WAR NOTES.

The Tribune's correspondent at Garibaldi's headquarters says the reported quarrel between Garibaldi and the Franc-tireurs is utterly unfounded. Large numbers of the latter throng his headquarters, asking to be placed under the General's command. From Marseilles and the departments of Turo and Laon et Loire they come faster than equipments can be supplied.—The General is in good condition and spirits and his troops have greatly improved.—Bismarck denies that Switzerland is compromised by the correspondence found in captured balloons.—The successes of the army of the Loire produced an excellent effect in Paris. Dissensions were forgotten and amnesty for political offences was granted. The people have abandoned their eagerness for a sortie and are resigned to stand on the defensive.—There has been no serious fighting and little cannonading around Paris lately.—It is reported that the Prussians lately besieging Montmedy and Mezieres have suddenly raised the siege and gone towards the interior of France.—The city of Lille is well armed, provisioned and garrisoned.—The manufacture of mitrailleuses and other arms is actively going on in France.—Four French ironclads are in port at Torbay and another is at Cuxhaven taking in coal.—An organization called the Civic Guard, composed mainly of foreigners, has been completed in Paris. Many of the inhabitants who are fit for service have also been enrolled. This body executes orders of the government, distributes rations to the citizens and soldiers, and performs other services of a similar nature.—The Prussians have been firing for two days on the engineers who are at work in front of Fort Issy. Forts Vanvres and Issy returned the fire.—The Germans were massing on the northern side of the city near St. Denis.—The people of Paris have not heard anything from Tours since Oct 24th.—The Prussians threaten Nogent, Le Ratron and Le Mans with a force three thousand strong. Another force is moving on Argentan. The German lines extend from Senoches to Auxerre, taking in Dreux.—It is denied that the army of the Loire is to move towards Paris. The commands of Bourbaki, Flay and Michel, in the North of France, have been superseded and the entire district assigned to Gen Farre.—Gen Bourbaki is expected at Tours to command the 18th army corps, in the army of the Loire.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The President has completed his message, and it was read in the Cabinet, Tuesday. It is brief, being about the length of his first annual message.

Col Louis E Granger of New Orleans, was arrested Tuesday night at a New York hotel for forgery. He is a native of Massachusetts and was Major of colored troops in the war. When arrested he was on his way to Boston to be married. He declares himself innocent and says that political influence is the cause of his arrest.

Be on your Guard.
The unexampled success, which for twenty years has accompanied the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters provokes the envy of ignorant nostrum-mongers in all parts of the country, and the counterfeiting business having been measurably played out in consequence of the numerous suits instituted against the offenders, a new system of tactics has been adopted. In the South and West especially, a legion of "Bitters," prepared from worthless materials and bearing a variety of names, have been got up by irresponsible adventurers with the hope of substituting them to some extent for the Standard Tonic of the Age. In some cases country druggists are the concocters and proprietors of these unscientific and trashy compounds, which are warmly recommended by the vendors, who endeavor to palm them off upon the credulous in lieu of the great specific which has never yet had a successful competitor either among proprietary preparations or the medicines prescribed in private practice. This notice is intended to put the public on their guard against personations of parties engaged in the attempt to substitute mere rubbish for the most efficient stomachic and alterative at present known. At this season of the year, it is of the greatest consequence that no tricks should be played with depressed and enfeebled systems. Ask, therefore, for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the great vegetable invigorant and alterative, and reject, with deserved contempt, the worse than useless medleys offered in its place. It is as important to the public as to the proprietors of the famous restorative, that this advice should be heeded.

PIANO-FORTES
PUT IN COMPLETE ORDER,
Without the Necessity of Sending them to a Factory.
The subscriber takes this method of informing the citizens of Bangor that he is here and will remain for a season, for the purpose of giving his personal attention to this branch of the business and is prepared to offer them his services in the several departments, including
REPAIRING,
RE-POLISHING,
RE-STRINGING,
New Hammers, Dampers, and Harping,
REGULATING, TONING AND TUNING.
With an experience of more than fifteen years in every department of manufacturing, including the last six years in the employ of Messrs. Chickering & Sons, of Boston, warrants a sufficient recommendation that he is qualified to put in complete order any work of this kind entrusted to his care.
The public, by availing themselves of this … can have their pianos restored to their original perfectness, by the necessary improvements without the inconvenience and expense of having it moved from the house, and may rely that every part will be put in the most complete order, … the facilities usually found at a factory, this presents an unusual opportunity.
What he proposes to effect as the result of his experience, is to restore them, from their present wiry, unmusical, noisy sound, to their original volume of tone, a purer and more even quality of tone, and an improved condition of the key-board and action, making them more susceptible and pleasant to the touch, thereby producing a change every way so desirable as would frequently change the owner's plan—to exchange the old for a new one.
Those desiring information regarding the condition of their instruments, can improve this opportunity (without expense) by leaving their address.
Warranted to give satisfaction or no pay. The patronage of the public is respectfully solicited.
The subscriber has made arrangements with Messrs LOWELL & SPENCER, Music Dealers No. 14 Main Street, to receive orders. Those from a distance can address by mail.

Thirteen years ago, deceased removed to Iowa, where he resided until his death. A PIG STORY. A few days since, two Bangor men who are interested in horse-flesh, took some "trading horses" and started down river on a speculating trip, and to give themselves a "country air," took a load of pigs. They reached a down-river town safely, when to their astonishment and disgust, they were arrested for stealing the pigs they had with them. Expostulations were of no avail. The officials had received a telegram from this city, describing the men and team, and requesting that they be arrested and detained for the theft, and the men of the law persisted in holding them. After considerable difficulty, bail was procured, and the disgusted horsemen proceeded to investigate, when it appeared that the dispatch had been sent by some mad wag, who deputed a boy to carry it to the telegraph office, and thus escaped detection. If the perpetrator of the goak ever falls into the hands of the arrested parties, he will probably come out bald-headed

MAINE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

AUGUSTA, Nov. 23, 1870.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

The subject for discussion at the Monday evening session was "Graded Certificates." It was opened by N. A. Luce of Freedom. He said it has been evident for some years that our teachers have been lacking in qualifications to instruct. This lack has been shown especially in the institutes the present fall. Has not this lack been caused by the method of examining and certificating teachers hitherto followed? Teachers have been examined for particular schools, hence there has been no standard; a teacher who has been rejected in one school district has passed into another and been accepted? a lack of of co-operation between the agents and committees has been a frequent cause. Examinations in too many cases have been more farces, hence, the system needs a change. The objects we should have in view in examining teachers are first an individual qualification for an individual school second, some method to point out individual weakness and failings. Again if we are to elevate our schools we need the co-operation of public sentiment. To attain these objects we should use a system of graded certificates. These certificates should be of three grades at least—town, county, and State, and each of these sub-graded. These certificates to be good as follows:—Town for the year, County good for two years anywhere in the county, State three years and good for whole State. Town certificates issued by town committees as now, County at county institutes, and State by state association.

Mr. Luce explained his system of certificates and examination by a series of set questions, which were used by the various committees in Waldo county during the past year, which produced uniformity.

Dr. True, thought teachers do not dread written examinations so much as is supposed, would present some special subject for teachers to qualify themselves upon, before their examination.

Mr Chase thought he would not like the idea of giving out questions before hand; thinks the teachers would all answer and make a fine show, but it is something like cramming.

Mr. Tash of Lewiston, favored the recommendations in the first speakers remarks.

Mr. Rounds of Farmington, Allen of Penn, and others continued briefly, and the subject was laid upon the table.

Joseph White, Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, then delivered a lecture upon "The Relation of the State to Public Education," which occupied an hour in delivery and was well received.

The following Committees were appointed: On nominations, Messrs. Stone, Rounds, Arey, Tash and Boothby.

On selecting editors for the Journal of Education:—Messrs. Stetson, Woodbury and Wentworth.

On Resolutions:—Messrs. Fletcher of Castine, Swazey of Paris, and Blethen of Farmington.

On time and place of next session:—Messrs Johnson, Wentworth and Barrell.

On teachers and teachers places:—Messrs Chase of Portland, Rounds of Farmington, Fletcher of Castine, Barrell of Lewiston, Lambert of Augusta.

SECOND DAY.—FORENOON.

The opening exercise consisted of a paper on "The Magazine and the Public School," by C. B. Stetson of Lewiston.

He said the first thing towards training the young in reading, is to teach the voice and eye to act in union. We need more concert reading. Wall cards are great aids towards teaching children to read; pupils should know how to read various kinds, and, all kinds of reading—there is not enough in three or four text-books, they must read much with facility.

A great demand or duty of teachers to-day, is to develop in the pupils a taste of reading good books. Thousands of miserable, foul, trashy papers and books are printed and scattered all over the land, and are producing evil effects. A taste for good reading is of great value, all through our lives, and if it was general society would be better for it

It is in this distinction that the magazine comes into use, it furnishes collateral reading for the children and youth. Our reading books are beyond the comprehension of the pupils, and therefore they are without interest to them; the magazine being received once a month, presents a newness and variety which delights the youth, and its contents fresh, and new, are a feast to him. Give children a motive to learn to read, and they will look out for the rest. But children must not be allowed to select for themselves;—their selections [illegible] be regulated. A taste for reading at [illegible] should be cultivated. Our teachers [illegible] become missionaries by putting these [illegible] ines adapted to their ages, into their [illegible] Give your pupils something to [illegible] them and learn them something every-[illegible] The newspaper is an auxilliary which [illegible] introduced into the schools to teach [illegible] olars of the facts and news of the day [illegible] the times.

Mr. Tash of Lewiston, thinks children should not read the same selection too often. Magazines would teach children silent reading which is that kind we read all our lives.

Mr. Fletcher said three objects are aimed at in teaching reading 1st, to read well, 2nd, to understand the meaning of the text, and 3d, to cultivate a taste for good reading; the magazine will furnish new, fresh, and entertaining reading.

Mr. Barrell of Lewiston, finds too many scholars deficient in reading when examined for admission to his schools. We can't get any one magazine to answer the purpose in school.

The next exercise was a paper, on "Compulsory Attendance," by A. P. Marble, of Worcester, Mass. He said large masses in every community are indifferent to the influence and condition of our schools. Our public schools are called free, but are not free, in the fact that all who wish may avail themselves of their advantages, or they may not. We have legislated to support our public schools but not to compel attendance. We need a law requiring attendance at the schools, somewhat similar to that of Prussia, where school system is far in advance of ours. He referred to the action of many of the States of the Union in regard to encouraging education.

If it is right for the State to support schools it is its duty to make attendance compulsory education, cannot be made universal without such attendance.

The subject of Object Lessons, their place and value, was then taken up. A paper upon the subject, by Miss Lathrop of Ohio Normal School, was read by Mrs. Hanson of Waterville. The reading occupied about half an hour, and was performed in a telling and very acceptable manner.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The question, "How shall a teacher best impart moral instruction," was the first for discussion and it was opened by Prof. F. A. Allen. He said one to teach morals must be moral himself If we, as teachers, have not clean religious principles and are moral ourselves, we shall fail. We must teach it from the heart, not merely from the mouth. By his actions the teacher must teach morality. Example is what the child needs, not only in the schoolroom, but everywhere. He gave several illustrations bearing upon the subject. If the teacher expects to make moral impressions upon his pupils it must be shadowed forth from his heart in his actions. Children understand the guiding actions which control us. A moral teacher without a Bible is better than an immoral teacher with a Bible in the schoolroom. Many of the crimes of which culprits are guilty spring from an ignorance of what is right and wrong. There is a law of trade of right and wrong, in business transactions, which should be taught to every pupil.

Dr. N. T. True said this subject has an important bearing upon every teacher. Certain teachers possess a certain bearing which tends to make their influence more powerful and effective in producing moral results and teaching morality. Negative truths may do well, but positive truths are preferable.

Mr. C B. Stetson of Lewiston, recommended printing texts upon the blackboard and allowing them to remain till they are positively fixed in their pupils' minds. Schools may also be taught verbally, short poems, passages of scriptures, &c by the teacher, and thus taught they will remain fixed in the mind forever.

Mr. Barrell of Lewiston, thought the subject a very important one. It is no use for a teacher to attempt to teach morals unless he exemplifies it in his daily acts. Thinks moral instruction should be given at regular hours or particular times.

G. T. Fletcher thinks more attention was given to moral instruction in our schools years ago than at present. Our teachers should realize that as they grow in intellectual attainments, so they should grow in moral truths. Much moral instruction can be given indirectly in our schools, for often the case occurs when the pupils are peculiarly susceptible to moral impressions.

A. P. Stone of Portland, thinks moral instruction should not be given at set times and in a set form. We cannot spare the Bible from the school, even if badly taught and read. If we want to exert a good moral influence in our schools we must cultivate in our hearts.

Prof. Allen does not believe in the self reporting system in school, as it fosters deception and lying among the pupils.

Mr. Stone of Portland, then presented the claims of the Journal of Education and solicited subscriptions. The committee to select a list of editors for the Journal for the year 1871 reported the following list, one for each month:

A. P. Stone, Portland; W. H. Lambert, Augusta; E. W. Hall, Waterville; A. A. Woodbury, Gorham; C. H. Fernald, Houlton; N. A. Luce, Freedom; C. C. Rounds, Farmington; G. T. Fletcher, Castine; Thos. Tash, Lewiston; Ed. S. Morris, Biddeford. Miss Eudora Sanford, Lewiston; Miss Olive A. Pond, Lewiston.

Mr. C. C. Rounds of Farmington, then read a paper on "Discipline." This is a very much abused term and is used loosely. Instruction may result in education and not in discipline. Gave some examples of definitions of the term discipline. Where we are best disciplined we make least mistakes. Moral instruction and moral discipline are different. Discipline may be termed the training of the powers for the most effective use. Educated persons are not always efficient workers—they are not always disciplined. Practice is not always discipline. It is not the nature of the mind to be tired—for it is an energy, a power, and all powers continue, they never cease to work.—When mental effort ceases, all ceases—it is death. Perfect discipline will reduce the mental effort to the minimum. We need speedier methods of learning to read and write. We need discipline to bring in a higher order and wider range of thoughts and ideas. All that we do has a mental power or force behind it. We can do nothing better than the ideal in our minds. After all it is spirit that underlies everything—it is spiritual force that organizes and directs everything. All our work is underlaid by thought—if the thought is noble the work may be noble.—Elementary processes need to be more thoroughly studied. The child is called upon daily to decide between right and wrong. They need elementary mental discipline in those particulars and upon those subjects. General principles are necessary for foundation stones, but elementary and intermediate principles are such as are adapted to the pupils' minds and should be taught with the most anxious care. His experience is that it is useless to tell persons how to live to preserve health unless you can present scientific proof and principles in evidence. We learn what we have been trained to learn. The great need is a more careful training in instruction that we may arrive at correct conclusions.

The committee on changing the time of holding the annual session of the State Association reported in favor of holding it in May. The report was accepted and on motion, the executive committee were instructed to make arrangements for the annual session during the month of May.

EVENING SESSION.

A. P. Stone of Portland, opened the discussion upon "Self Improvement of Teachers"—The tendency of teaching is to bring a person into a stereotyped routine. They are apt to get into the ruts—to grow narrow. Therefore we must do something for self improvement. Teachers must visit other teachers' schools and learn how their colaborers operate, and to come in contact with each other and see each other's work. The lines between primary, grammar and high schools are arbitrary, so far as improvement is concerned.—Another course of self improvement open to all is to attend our teachers' institutes and associations. An institution is a brief Normal School. The more preparation we make the better we can perform our duties Books cannot make a teacher, but the reading of books will give us more light and help make us good teachers We cannot teach school by rules. Of all things we must avoid copying, parrot like, others' methods of teaching. We can learn from all, but absolutely follow none.

Mr. Stetson of Lewiston, said he believed in self improvement obtained in a circumlocutory way A teacher needs to know something of everything We must teach as nature teaches. We want positive knowledge to start with and then power. This is to be obtained by conversation, by reading, and by literature

Dr True of Bethel, gave some of his early experience in teaching, methods of self-improvement followed, etc.

Mr. Lambert of Augusta, thought the self-improvement of teachers by study of their school books is not followed closely. There are three kinds of education—direct, indirect, and self education Don't think teachers can find time to devote to studies or objects outside of his teaching

In response to an invitation, Miss Pond of Lewiston read two poetical selections, one of Charles Mackay's, and the other a battle piece entitled "The return of the Hillside Legion."

A letter was read from Hon. John D. Philbrick, saying that on account of sickness he should be unable to attend and lecture on "School Supervision," as expected.

The committee to select a committee to take measures to petition the legislature for an appropriation for the support of the Journal of Education, reported the following.—Nelson Dingley Lewiston, C. C. Rounds, and A. P. Stone Superintendent Johnson referred to the discourse of Rev. Dr. Ballard, late Superintendent of Schools of Maine and presented a resolution of condolence and sympathy to the family of the deceased, which was adopted by a rising vote.

Upon the question of introducing magazines into the school room, which was taken up by special request, Prof Cruttenden of New York offered some interesting remarks. He continued to considerable extent in administering what he termed a severe "whalloping" to the teachers for teaching reading as is done in our schools.

WEDNESDAY—FORENOON SESSION.

Prayer by Prof. Allen. Proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year with the following results: President, C. C. Rounds, Farmington; Vice President, Thos Tash, Lewiston; Secretary and Treasurer, C. B Stetson, Lewiston; Executive Committee, A. P. Stone, Portland, J. S. Barrell, Lewiston W. J. Cottrell, Calais; G. T. Fletcher Castine; W. Johnson, Augusta, J. B. Webb, Gorham, J. H. Hanson, Waterville.

The President was authorized to appoint sub-committee during the year.

The closing lecture of the session under the high sounding title of "Sentential Structure," was then delivered by D. H. Cruttenden of New York. The lecture was a long and rambling one in which the speaker had ample occasion and opportunity to ventilate his peculiar ideas and ride his hobbies. According to his opinion almost everything is wrong, and can only be righted by following his lead. Especially in the method of teaching children, he would completely overturn the prevailing system. The Professor is a radical, an ultraist and a hobbyist, and he rides his hobbies to the death. His lectures are almost as utterly unreportable as the wild utterances of a Train or a Daniel Pratt.

The following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved. 1st, That the Association tender thanks to the State authorities for the Hall opened for use, and to Col. Baker of Augusta House, for reduction of terms to members of the Association.

Resolved 2d, That we express our thanks to the President and executive officers of the Association for the programme and its variations which have rendered the exercises of the meeting so interesting and profitable.

Resolved. 3d, That we tender our thanks to the able educators from Massachusetts, for their important services rendered the Association and the cause of eduction by their presence and words.

Resolved 4th, That in the opinion of this Association, the promise of great improvement in the educational work of the State given by legislation in regard to Supervisors and County Institutes is being more than realized.—that the law transferring the employment of teachers from District agents to town Committees, will tend to give efficiency to our Schools.

Resolved. 5th, That as the State recognizes the right and necessity of taxation to support education, it is the imperative duty of the commonwealth to take some effective measures to bring all the children of the State between the ages of 7 and 14 years under the influence of the public or private schools.

Resolved 6th, That the State should provide for the further support of Common Schools by a State educational tax of one mill upon each dollar of tax property, to be apportioned to the cities and towns according to the actual school attendance.

Resolved 7th, That this Association recognizes the representatives of the press as indispensable co-laborers in the education field, and that the able corps of reporters in attendance, do [illegible] our thanks for their services in bringing the exercises of this session before the people of our State.

Resolved. 8th, That we tender our thanks to the Railroads of the State, for free return tickets upon this occasion.

The Association then adjourned sine die after singing Old Hundred.

The session has been one of the most interesting and valuable ever held, and the attendance of live, earnest working teachers, large and encouraging. The weather the first two days was fine, but the session closed during a severe storm of sleet. The teachers and friends of education present, parted with regret and hurried to their respective homes, to partake of the hospitalities and good cheer of Thanksgiving Day.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Gortschakoff's answer to Granville left St. Petersburg on Monday by a special messenger. It was not communicated to the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, but his dispatches intimate that the note is conciliatory in tone. It is believed at the English Foreign Office that Gortschakoff, while withholding the precise information from Sir A. Buchanan, has encouraged him to report favorably to London regarding the disposition of Russia. There is the same authority for saying that Gortschakoff's circular was a surprise to Bismarck, who, it is thought, indicated his discontent by the civilities shown Odo Russell during his journey and on his arrival at Versailles.

A dispatch from the Tribune's correspondent at Versailles of the 21st, says that Odo Russell has been received with great cordiality and will have an opportunity of disclosing his English views under the most favorable circumstances. Official information is to the same effect.

The correspondent of the Tribune at Vienna, telegraphs that intelligence has been received that the most conciliatory answer has been sent to England There is a marked change in the tone of the English Foreign Office since last week, when Granville's answer was first published. The fear was lest public opinion should not support a protest involving a possible recourse to war. The English press is so unanimous, that it is officially said to have had an undoubted effect on Gortschakoff. Now that a peaceful solution is looked for, apprehension is expressed also officially lest a war feeling might be roused that it would be difficult to allay

Austria's rejoinder, supposed to have been prompted by England, is as follows: Russia's wishes in regard to the Black Sea might have been put forward through diplomatic channels, and possibly have been acceeded to by the Great Powers concerned, but an arbitrary expression of her will calls for the greatest resistance from all parties.

EXTRAORDINARY PEDESTRIAN FEAT. M. J. McEttrick, the famous pedestrian, who is now in training and making arrangements for a feat in which he will attempt to walk a thousand miles in a thousand hours, is to give an illustration of his wonderful powers of endurance this week at Boston. In this feat, which will commence at 2 o'clock, P. M, on Thanksgiving day, he will make an endeavor to walk one hundred and four consecutive hours without sleep, the only stops to be thirty minutes in each twenty-four hours—four times during the journey. Three or four physicians are to be in attendance during the feat, and are to make scientific examinations of the physical condition of the pedestrian, before, during and after the feat. It will be the greatest pedestrian feat ever attempted in this part of the country, and if McEttrick accomplishes it, of which he has no doubt, he is to receive one thousand dollars.

THE GRAND CENTRAL HOTEL.—Among the most striking types of the progress of the age, is the development of palatial hotel enterprises. New York has just ushered in a new triumph in this particular. The Grand Central Hotel situated on Broadway, midway between the up town and down town hotels, rears its magnificent marble front and swallows up almost an entire block. Only opened, as it were, on yesterday, it has become already crowded with guests, from every part of the country. As you enter its magnificent portals, the brilliant coup d œil exceeds any thing yet produced in this country or the world. One becomes absolutely confused with the surrounding magnificence. It has to be seen to be appreciated The Grand Central bears about the same relation to other first-class hotels as the Great Eastern did to other first-class ocean steamers. With between one and two hundred rooms more than any other hotel on this continent, the Grand Central is the colossus of the age. In all the appointments, everything is fully up to the mark for a first-class New York city hotel. The carpets, furniture, parlors, linen, and all the et cetera, are gorgeous.

The genial Proprietor, Mr. H. L. Powers, of hotel renown, whose remarkable administrative qualities eminently fit him to preside over this modern Colliseum, and all his numerous corps of assistants, are most attentive, polite and kind, and appear to run the vast establishment with natural ease and system Already the Eastern element is concentrating at this house, where one is almost certain to meet with friends and acquaintances without the trouble of going around in the search to the other hotels. To enter upon a minute description of this new wonder of the world would be fatiguing, from the inexhaustibility of detail Suffice to say, that those who may favor the immense establishment with their patronage, cannot fail to be pleased with the genuine courtesy extended, and to retain agreeable remembrances of the uniform and polite civilities showered upon them. The price of board at this hotel is exceedingly moderate, ranging from three to four dollars per day, according to location of room. It

Here in the golden hush of autumn days,
Earth softly pausing from her summer glee,
Like a tired child who sleeps amid his plays,
We bring, O Lord, our thankful song to Thee!

Thanks for the link that binds the East and West,
For brotherhood, for freedom, for the tie
Which knits together noble souls, confessed
Almoners of Thy love and charity.

"Bringing our sheaves" we bow before Thy throne,
Accept our offerings, Lord, accept our powers;
And as in ages past, in days to come
"Be thou—our fathers' God—our sons' and ours.

[Written for the Whig and Courier.]

UNCLE JAKE'S THANKSGIVING PARTY.

BY MRS. H. G. ROWE.

[Concluded.]

"That, you confounded greenhorn, you! Why, that's a Sarytogy trunk. What d'ye spose 'twas. A portyble cow house for uncle Jake's best Dorram heifer?"

And Jess (one of Ezra Deane's boys) struck an attitude in front of the big trunk belonging to the city relative, that, having been deposited in a dark corner of the piazza had had been overlooked in the confusion of the night before, and looked down upon the group of laughing youngsters with a solemnity befitting the grave importance of the scene and subject.

"Or p'raps—I don't say he does, mind ye—but I say p'raps he keeps his Bar in there."

"His what?" yelled the youngsters.

"His Bar. Yer see" and Jess lowered his tone mysteriously "it must take an awful sight o' Bar's ile for a top dressin' tu all that har' head an' face both, an' naterally 'twould git kinder rancid keepin' it in barrels, so p'raps he takes the Bar along with 'im, an' drains out the ile, a pint or so at a time, jist as he wants it."

The group laughed uproariously, as they usually did at Jess' jokes, and as the owner of the trunk and uncle Jacob just then made their appearance in the doorway, the mirth became less boisterous, although more than one pair of eyes sparkled mischievously, as the young gentleman remarked in the pompous tone that seemed natural to him:

"I shall have to trouble you, uncle, to see that my trunk is carried to my room. It was unfortunately forgotten last night by that stupid lout of a driver who evidently knew nothing of his business, or he would, have taken it up without waiting to be told. Uncle Jacob's bronzed face grew several shades redder, and he seemed about to make a sharp reply, but glancing at the listless, effeminate face beside him, a look half of scorn, half of pity crept into his honest eyes,—a look that said as plainly as looks can say:

"Poor lad! His mother has made a Molly coddle of him, and he's no more responsible for the foolish talk he makes than my old donkey is for braying; its his nature to."

And having arrived at this charitable conclusion, the old farmer stooped, and lifting one end, of the trunk, called to "Jess" to "help bring the ark up stairs;" a summons that that young gentleman obeyed with alacrity, amusing himself as they slowly worked their way upward, in giving vent to sundry ferocious "growls" and "snarls," intended for the edification of the grinning audience below.

It was a remarkably mild morning for November, and although the sun had not yet kissed the silvery rime from the fields, his smile lent a cheery glow to the landscape, that stretching far away, acre upon acre, seemed even to the eye of that city bred youth a fair as well as rich possession. That it was thoroughly cultivated was evident, and as he remembered (he couldn't help it, of course) that all this would be included in the 'gift of one small hand, and a very dainty one too, his spirits rose proportionally, until he even began to feel a desire to fraternize with his fellow guests, and addressing Jess who had just returned from his upward trip, he remarked condescendingly:

"Uncle Jacob has a fine place here."

"Well, he has—that's a fact!"

And Jess cast admiring eyes over the landscape that lay stretched out like a map before them.

"You see that stretch o' wood, over there tu yer right?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's his, clear through to Toby's pasture. Then, on 'tother side it runs tu the very foot o' that ragged mountain. It's the biggest farm in these parts, now I tell ye; an' that man clears every year o' his life more'n a thousan' dollars,—no," as if feeling that he had gone beyond all reasonable belief in his zeal for his kinsman, "p'raps I'm goin' too far. We'll call it eight hundred, or—well, eight hundred an' fifty. I guess that's about fair."

The other laughed, somewhat to Jess' bewilderment.

"He'd be a long time getting rich at that rate. But I suppose he has other sources of income besides his farm?"

"Oh, yes!" was the eager reply. "That's his saw mill, an' some woolen mills he an' some others started four or five years ago; an' when they run the railroad through his land he made 'em pay a pretty good lot for right o' way; an' then he's a Justice an' gets ever so much in the course o' the year for marryin' folks that are kind o' bashful about goin' to a minister; an' he's a select man an' school committee, an' a Deacon, but I guess that don't pay no great, unless"—

"Well, well, that will do;" and as Jess looked somewhat abashed at the sudden interruption, the other good naturedly continued the conversation by remarking, in an affectedly indifferent tone:

"And his daughter will be his only heiress, I suppose."

"Her and her husban' of course."

A bright thought suddenly arose upon the young man's befogged brain:

"Is there," and he lowered his tone with a guilty consciousness of his own selfish object "anybody attentive to her,—that is, any one whom she seems particularly to favor?"

Jess stared, astonished.

"Why didn't you know," he began, but a chorus of merry girlish voices interrupted him, and as the cloud of youthful femininity floated out upon the piazza, surcharged with a perfect hail storm of jest, laughter, and saucy chatter, it naturally enough drove every thought of the least importance from the susceptible mind of poor Jess, and reduced him for the time, to the condition of a mere absorbent, so clogged with the sweetness around him, that his nimble tongue was for once silent in spite of his companion's evident vexation.

"Don't you think, Mr. Grosgrain," cried a black eyed nymph in a scarlet jacket, "that, as this is cousin Sue's wedding day, she ought"—

Here she stopped abruptly, astonished and almost frightened at the sudden change in her listener's face and voice, as after, glowering upon her a moment, he repeated in a harsh undertone:

"Her wedding day?"

"Certainly. It isn't possible that you didn't know it?"

The look, half curious, half incredulous that accompanied the question aroused the bewildered man to a sense of his own dignity and he forced himself to ask with a tolerable affectation of indifference:

"And the happy man?"

"It's her old playmate, Major Reade, of course. Uncle Jacob says," she added laughing "that they exchanged corals in their cradles, and when his mother died three years ago she went with the mourners."

"An unmistakable proof of her attachment to her son."

He couldn't help that sneer, and somehow, he seemed to feel the better for it. No disappointment is half so bitter if allowed to effervesce a little, and thus relieved he found he could muster a fair show of patient attention to his companion's valuable comments. "It'll be awful handsome for Squire Reade, I suppose,—for it's decided that the Deacon shall have the young folks with him, that is, when they're at home, for the Major's business keeps him away most of the time now, and there's some loud talk o' sendin' him to the Legislature next term; an' then Sue'll be a 'Representative's lady;'" and the style with which the little maiden concluded had in it just as much of envy as her really warm, unselfish heart was capable of.

Mrs. Grosgrain's surprise and indignation on receipt of the unexpected intelligence that her son naturally took the earliest opportunity to impart to her, rose high and was scarcely modified by her brother's reference to a certain letter that had followed the Thanksgiving invitation, and which was proved never to have been received.

"You see" explained the Deacon, eager to soothe the sister's wounded feelings "'twasn't really decided to have the weddin' on Thanksgiving till after I'd writ to you an' Horace about coming, so I just sent a line tellin' you that 'twas a weddin' you was invited to, (for I thought mebby you'd like to get a nice cap or some such fixins) but it seems you didn't get the last letter?"

"No. We were away from home for a fortnight before we came here, and the letter is probably at our hotel in the city now." "Oh, well," laughed the brother good naturedly. "There ain't no great harm done far as I can see, by yer not knowin' it before you came 'Taint as if you was expected ter take the part o' bride, yerself."

It was certainly ridiculous for a woman of her age to blush at such a bungling jest, and perhaps, after all, it might not have been her brother's words but rather surprise at sight of two manly figures advancing leisurely up the long garden walk, that brought such a glow to the dame's still fair cheek, and a softer light to her eye, as she remarked in a hasty "aside" to her companion:

"It's Gershom Reade, and he hasn't changed a particle since I saw him the last time—the last Thanksgiving that I spent at home, before I was married in January. But," she added, curiously "who is that portly, grey haired gentleman with him? He has a familiar look, but I can't think where I have seen him before."

A burst of laughter from the Deacon interrupted her, and as the new comers approached he advanced to meet them with the merry salutation:

"How dye do, Squire? an' how are you Major? Here's Maria," and he nodded toward his sister, "is insistin' on it that time has been a standin' still with her old friend, an' that he looks as young an' bloomin' as he did twenty-five years ago."

"She ought to give the old fellow some credit, to pay for touching her own face so lightly," and the "portly, grey haired gentleman" clasped in his own the hand that fluttered and trembled like a romantic school girl's.

The old "nack" of making pretty, complimentary speeches; the old half questioning half tender look in the clear grey eyes; the old determined but pleasant expression about the now grizzled mouth,—why, he really hadn't changed so much after all; and long before another hour had gone by, Mrs. Grosgrain had arrived at the conclusion that her old friend was actually in the prime of life—, handsomer really than in his more youthful days; more dignified and possessed—a man to whom life brought plenty without satiety, experience without distrust.

It was so pleasant to listen as he recalled the scenes and companions of other days, and as one after another rose before her mental vision, the silken robed dame saw herself a little barefooted maiden once more, knee high in nodding buttercups and purple clover blossoms; peering with bright eager eyes beneath the broad leaves for the ripe, red strawberries, eating the first and throwing the next one over her shoulder for luck; helping to drive cows home from pasture, to the familiar tinkle of the leader's bell; the schoolhouse, unpainted, shabby, and with a decided "leaning to Sawyers" as the boys used to say, when describing its irregular proportions; even the poor forlorn looking cinnamon rose bush that some public spirited citizen had planted under one of the windows, and whose buds were always ruthlessly confiscated before they had begun to even think of peeping out of their green hoods, was recalled as one of the pleasant memories of those unforgotten days.

More than once Horace, who was exerting himself to the utmost in the effort to find favor in the eyes of the younger gentleman, cast a bewildered and not satisfied look at his mother's animated face: "I don't believe she's saying a word for me, or even thinking of me," was the dissatisfied comment of his selfish soul; and when, at dinner, she was still monopolized by the gallant squire he began to think himself a decidedly neglected and ill used personage.

In vain his next neighbor, the young lady in the scarlet jacket tried a score of her little coquettish arts upon him; he listened in frowning silence, not even deigning a smile at her liveliest sallies, while he thought discontentedly upon his disappointment, and selfishly balanced the probabilities of any benefit accruing to himself from the new relationship.

Perhaps, after all, it might be the means of securing him the desired appointment, for it would be decidedly awkward for the Major to refuse to use his influence in behalf of one of his wife's family, so soon after his marriage; neither would he be likely to investigate the past too thoroughly, for similar reasons—and under the influence of these hopeful speculations he began slowly to unbend himself to the genial influences around him, condescendingly accepting his fair neighbor's challenge to break a "wishing bone" with her, and listening with some show of interest to a weather wise veteran's prediction of an "open winter," because the breast bone of the biggest turkey was dark colored instead of white.

"A sure sign; and the old man nodded sagaciously at the mystic symbol held aloft between his thumb and fore finger, "I never knowed it ter fail but once."

Everybody knew that there was a "colon" after that "once," for the old man was a famous joker and story teller, and everybody insisted of course, upon knowing

"When that once was?"

The old man's eyes twinkled merrily, as he gave a sly glance in the direction of his city relation, while the good natured heartsomeness of his tone disarmed, for the moment, even Horace's touchy dignity, as he said, with mock emphasis:

"That time was twenty-five years ago this Thanksgivin'. I remember the turkey had an uncommon white weather bone, a sure sign of a cold winter, I said then, but in February I was in New York, an' there I saw my cousin Maria Grosgrain right out in the open street."

Mrs. Grosgrain laughed as heartily as any one at her old friends' whim ... pun upon her name, nor was the flush upon her cheek that of anger as he added, in an undertone intended for her ear alone:

"P'raps in case of an open winter Reades may flourish in New York, if yer take good care on 'em."

Horace's suspicious ear caught the words, and a sneer curled his thin lips as he remarked to his lively neighbor:

"That old man is very presuming, it seems to me. Punning upon a person's, especially a lady's name, in company, is not only a proof of ill breeding, but is decidedly impudent, according to my ideas."

The young lady smiled good humoredly: "Oh, everybody knows that Uncle Ben didn't mean the least harm. He's always joking, and no one thinks of taking offence at his good natured nonsense."

The offended youth deigned no reply to this, but his eyes ... it roved searchingly upon his mother's face ... with an angry light, that, in the ... excitement and confusion attending upon the coming ceremony passed unnoticed ... by the object of it, whose usual ... in whatever concerned her ... seemed suddenly, to have deserted her.

Her companion laughed appreciatively, evidently oblivious of the fact that young Grosgrain standing close at her elbow, regarded her with an angry frown and a contemptuous stare.

"I'm afraid you find it rather dull Mr. Grosgrain, for, although many of the company are relatives, I suppose the most of them are strangers none the less, to you."

The Major's voice was an unusually pleasant one, and in spite of the perturbed state of his feelings the young man addressed turned with an involuntary brightness of his sullen face, as he replied with an effort at ease:

"It would be scarcely honest to deny the truth of your supposition, for I must confess to finding it a little dull here. In fact, I have been so accustomed, all my life, to constant change of place and scene, with the natural excitement of travel, that even a day's quiet is irksome to me."

"You have been abroad, I believe?"

"Yes," and he spoke with animation. "We,—my mother and myself have travelled over every part of Europe worth seeing. For the last two years we have lingered in Paris, until the French language has become as familiar to me as my mother tongue."

"Ah?" and the Major turned away his face to conceal a smile, while the other lowering his tone until it was almost abject in its eagerness, went on:

"If I could succeed in getting a position under government, an appointment as——to Paris, for instance, my knowledge of the people and their language, would be of great service to me."

"No doubt. Have you applied for the position?"

The Major's tone was embarrassed and uneasy. "No," confidentially. "To be frank with you, I had hoped everything from ... intercession in my behalf."

"Oh, that is all right, then, for I was an officer in one of the first regiments that went from my native State."

"Yes, I heard you speaking of your military adventures, when I drove you over from the Depot on the night of your arrival."

The two men looked at each other steadily for more than a minute in perfect silence; then the Major's stern face relaxed, a humorous twinkle softened the scorn of his eye and there was an ominous twitching about his bearded lips as he remarked in the quietest and most matter-of-fact of tones:

"It isn't safe to tell one's secrets, even in a foreign tongue, before strangers.

Will you have a cigar?"

And the calumet of social ... was comfortably smoked by the two, upon Uncle Jacob's back piazza.

"The Thanksgiving party is to be at father Reade's this year," and Susie smiled cheerily as her friend remarked in rather a doubtful tone:

"Will his new wife like that arrangement? I never saw her but once and that was at your wedding, but I got the idea that she was a rather 'set up' sort of a person,—one of the kind that wouldn't enjoy waiting upon company unless they were of the very tip top of the heap."

"The party is given at her suggestion, and she seemed as pleased as a child in making her arrangements for it. The truth is, that now, for the first time in all her life, her heart is really at rest, and she shows it in the quiet, loving discharge of everyday duties, that a few years ago she would have felt as a humiliation."

"I'm glad that she comes so willing to fit herself for her new life," was the rather coldly spoken comment. "But where is that hopeful son of her's? I remember I thought him the stupidest creature; when I had to sit next him at the table, that Thanksgiving day. He was hardly decent, for he wouldn't speak to me at all, unless I asked him a question, and then half the time, he only grunted."

Mrs. Reade shook her head regretfully. "Really, I don't know much about him, only that he is living a dependent, useless life,—a sort of social bummer, as my husband calls him, living upon his friends, and coaxing money from his mother to support his extravagances, while he affects to be terribly humiliated at her marriage with one whom he considers so far below her."

OF IOWA,

Now Nearly Completed.

This road is built by a Company of strong capitalists, who have pushed their work forward at a rapid rate of the Company remain, which are offered at the very low rate of 90 and Accrued Interest.

ONE MILLION OF THE

Among the advantages are—

1st. The road is nearly finished; and the cars are expected to run across the State in 60 ...
2d. The road has been built only of the best material, the iron having been manufactured expressly for it, at a much higher cost than that usually paid.
3d. It runs through a most superb agricultural country.
4th. It has great advantages in carrying coal North and bringing lumber South.
5th. The Mortgage is only $16,000 per mile, while many other roads are bonded for double this amount.
6th. The road is principally owned by bankers and other capitalists, who have invested a large sum in its construction, and who have every reason to take care of its obligations.
7th. A first Mortgage for so small an amount, upon a road so near completion, and in such strong hands, may well be considered a perfectly safe security.

We believe there will be no more favorable time to sell Governments, and buy really First-class Railroad Securities—such as these—than the present. With any further decline in Gold, Governments must decline also.

To Physicians

New York, August 15th, 1868.

Allow me to call your attention to my PREPARATION OF

Compound Extract

BUCHU

The component parts are BUCHU, LONG LEAF, CUBEBS, JUNIPER BERRIES.

MODE OF PREPARATION.—Buchu, in vacuo. Juniper Berries, by distillation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement with spirits obtained from Juniper Berries; very little sugar is used, and a small proportion of spirit. It is more palatable than any now in use.

Buchu, as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance; the action of a flame destroys this (its active principle), leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates; the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation, upon inspection, it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopea, nor is it a Syrup—and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflammation exist. In this you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Hoping that you will favor it with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your approbation,

With a feeling of confidence,
I am, very respectfully,
H. T. HELMBOLD,
Chemist and Druggist of 19 years' Experience.

[From the largest Manufacturing Chemists in the World.]

NOVEMBER 1, 1854

"I am acquainted with Mr. H. T. Helmbold, he occupied the Drug Store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise."

WILLIAM WEIGHTMAN,
Firm of Powers & Weightman, Manufacturing Chemists, Ninth and Brown Streets, Philadelphia.

HELMBOLD'S
Fluid Extract Buchu,

for weakness arising from indiscretion. The exhausted powers of Nature which are accompanied by so many alarming symptoms, among which will be found Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Memory, Wakefulness, Horror of Disease, or Forebodings of Evil, in fact, Universal Lassitude, Prostration, and inability to enter into the enjoyments of society.

The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which invariably does. If no treatment is submitted to Consumption or insanity ensues.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU, in affections peculiar to Females, is unequalled by any other preparation, as in Chlorosis, or Retention, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrus State of the Uterus, and all complaints incident to the decline or change of life.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH will radically exterminate from the system diseases arising from habits of dissipation, at little expense, little or no change in diet, no inconvenience or exposure; completely superseding those unpleasant and dangerous remedies, Copaiva and Mercury, in all these diseases.

USE HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU in all diseases of these organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. It is pleasant in taste and odor, "immediate" in action, and more strengthening than any of the preparations of Bark or Iron.

Those suffering from broken-down or delicate constitutions, procure the remedy at once.

The reader must be aware that, however slight may be the attack of the above diseases, it is certain to affect the bodily health and mental powers.

All the above diseases require the aid of a Diuretic. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU is the great Diuretic.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers Everywhere.

Price—$1.25 per Bottle, or 6 bottles for $6.50.

Delivered to any address.

Address, H. T. HELMBOLD, Drug and Chemical Warehouse,

One-Half Township No. 5, Range 4, Oxford County.

The whole township contains twenty-six thousand (26,000) acres; is heavily timbered with spruce, estimated at sixty to eighty millions, all of which stands within near and easy hauling distance of the Magalloway river or its branches, which runs through the town, or Parmachenee Lake, which is embraced within its limits.

Also 10,000 Acres of Land in the Town of Byron, Oxford Co., well covered with large Spruce timber. Swift river and its branches run through these lands and empty into the Androscoggin below Rumford Falls.

Also 1100 Acres Timber and Wood Land in Town of Gorham, N. H.

two miles above the Alpine House, on the line of the Grand Trunk Railroad, and the banks of the Androscoggin river. There is a large quantity of wood on these lots which, from its proximity to the Railroad, is steadily increasing in value.

Also 2300 Acres Lands in the Towns of Albany and Stoneham.

near the village of North Waterford, Oxford County This land is covered with thrifty sapling Pine timber, standing near Crooked river, which runs through the tract. Logs put into Crooked river can be run to Saccarappa, or by hauling four to five miles they can be put into the Saco. There is a good mill privilege, with a single saw mill on the tract; distance to the canal at Harrison two miles; to the railroad at South Paris twelve miles. The land is valuable for settling purposes after being cleared of timber.

Also 435 Shares of Stock in the Lewiston Steam Mill Company, the whole capital stock being represented by 827 shares. The property of the company consists of a Steam Saw Mill, capable of manufacturing five million feet of long lumber, with a proportionate amount of clapboards, shingles and laths. About fifteen acres land in the city of Lewiston, well located for building purposes, and thirty thousand acres of timber land, well located on the Androscoggin river and its branches, from which but a small quantity of the timber has been cut.
